

Friday, 12 September 2008

The last dermatologist I visited snubbed at organic skincare. I don't blame him given that his is an industry that is driven by groundbreaking formulas in cosmeceutical science and promise of immediate results. There also wasn't an organic skincare range that was used and recommended by dermatologists at all. But with the launch of Sophyto Organic Skincare Range, the world's first professional grade organic range endorsed by medical skincare professionals, I think he should have less to complain.

Certified organic by Soil Association of UK

In fact, Sophyto which has an average of 95% organic content is also certified organic by Soil Association of UK, one of the world's most stringent standards in the world. The range is made in UK, developed after 8 years of research and development, including specific methods of working with complete whole organic nutrients were applied to Chinese and Western medicine, ayurvedic homeopathy and naturopathic remedies.

Combination of vitamins, minerals and plant chemicals

The Sophyto range is said to contain literally hundreds of complex vitamins, minerals, and plant chemicals that have been scientifically proven to be more potent than just one element. The formulas are pH balanced to promote healthy skin care solutions for anti-aging, acne, fine lines and wrinkles. For example, the Sophyto cleanser is based upon natural food enzymes that to prep the skin for the penetration of bioactive ingredients present in all Sophyto products. In addition, I was told they do not contain any form of preservatives.

Sophyto sample kit & 30-days money back guarantee

What's great about Sophyto is that they offer customers a sample kit containing 5 trial-sized skin essentials for cleansing, purifying, toning, & hydrating. This allows customers to have a better idea of what suits their needs before committing to the full size products. In addition, Sophyto also offers a 30-days money back guarantee on their products - something rarely heard of in the skincare industry. If you purchase their products and are not happy with them, simply bring it back to the store you've purchased for an exchange or refund!

Get more details of the Sophyto Organic Skincare range at www.BudCosmetics.com Singapore